THEOLOGICAL ANTHROPOLOGY

Christians generally share the belief that humans are in some sense children of God. However, this belief takes a distinctive and radical form as it is understood by Mormons, who have taken a more positive view of human embodiment and finitude. This conference will explore LDS concepts of the nature of human beings, including comparison with other religious and non-religious perspectives.

Speakers Include

Terryl Givens, Professor of Literature and Religion and Bostwick Professor of English, University of Richmond

Grant Underwood, Professor of History, Brigham Young University

Kevin Hart, Edwin B. Kyle Professor of Christian Studies, University of Virginia

David O'Connor, Associate Professor of Philosophy, University of Notre Dame

David Paulsen, Professor of Philosophy, Brigham Young University

Sessions will be held in the Library Lecture Hall (LI 120)
